Experts on bilingual education will meet at the Moldova office of the Russian Federal Agency for Humanitarian Cooperation on April 24 to discuss teaching in two languages at schools and kindergartens.

The meeting is part of a broader project on bilingual education for children, called Language for Integration and Global Human Tolerance, or VIA LIGHT, in which RIA Novosti is a partner. The project, launched in January 2012, aims to develop a unified methodology to prepare educators to deal with bilingual children.

Specialists in bilingual education from Cyprus, Estonia, Finland, Germany, Latvia, Moldova and Russia are taking part in the conference, which will assess the existing level of the bilingual education specialists' professional training and the importance that the countries in the project lend to the problem, said Marina Burd, a member of the German delegation.
